Q.1. What does the third level refer to?

Ans. Jack Finney is the author of The Third Level. The author addresses the human nature of running away from a problem and seeking solace in an imaginary world in The Third Level. The author or narrator of The Third Level creates a character named Charley who wishes to escape the problems in his life and travel to an imaginary world known as the third level. There are generally two levels: the ground level and the basement. The third level refers to a means of escape from the modern world's problems. We call it escapism.

Q.2. How does Charley reach the third level? (HBSE 2017 D)

Ans. One day, Charley left the office very late and decided to go home by train as the bus took longer. He reached the basement of the Central Station. The suburban trains leave from the second level. But in the meantime, he got lost in his imagination, lost the way, and reached the so-called third level. On the 'Central has been an exit, a way of Maybe that's how the tunnel I got into...' On the third level, he found a different setup of the railway station.

Q.3. How can you say that Charley keeps losing his way? (HBSE 2017B)

Ans. Charley wanted to reach home, and he decided to reach home by suburban train. So, he went downstairs to the Grand Central Station. Suddenly, he lost himself in his dreams and lost the way, and reached the third level. He was upset that day and fought with his girlfriend, Louisa. This way, he lost track and reached the third level.

Q.4. Describe Charley's experience at the third level. (HBSE 2020A)

Ans. In The Third Level, the author or narrator, Jack Finney, creates a character named Charley who wishes to escape the problems in his life and travel to an imaginary world known as the third level. "I saw the room was smaller, there were fewer ticket windows and train gates, and the information booth in the center was wood and old-looking." And the man in the booth wore a green eyeshade and long black sleeves.

Q.5. What did Charley's friends say about him? What did his hobby of stamp collecting point to?

Ans. Charley told his story of the third level to his friends and shared his experiences with the third level. His friends considered him an escapist. They told him that his hobby of stamp collecting was also a temporary escape from the situation. They say that it was his way of escaping from the situation.

Q.6. Do you think that the third level was a medium of escape for Charley? Why?

Ans. The author or narrator of The Third Level creates a character named Charley who wishes to escape the problems in his life and travel to an imaginary world known as the third level. Charley fought with his girlfriend, Louisa. He was lost in his thoughts and wanted to reach home with this problem in his mind. He reached the third level of the Grand Central. It was a total escape from problems for Charley. On the 'Central has been an exit, a way of maybe that's how the tunnel I got into...'

Q.7. What do you infer from Sam’s letter to Charley?

Ans. Sam’s letter to Charlie again mentioned a way of escaping the reality of life. This is just an imaginary letter, and there is no character like Sam in the story. The author simply uses different characters to prove his point about escapism. In the modern world, we always try to find an easy respite from the situation. Therefore, we should face the music instead of searching for the third level like Charley.

Q.8. Do you see an intersection of time and space in the story?

Ans. The story reveals an intersection of time and space in the story. The author tries to take us back with the help of his character, Charley. Charley reached the third level, where he was confronted with people of different eras. The ticket counter and currency were different. “I saw the room was smaller, there were fewer ticket windows and train gates, and the information booth in the center was wood and old-looking.”

Introductory Paragraph of the Long Answer Question

The author addresses the human nature of running away from a problem and seeking solace in an imaginary world in The Third Level. In The Third Level, the author or narrator, Jack Finney, creates a character named Charley who wishes to escape the problems in his life and walk into an imaginary world known as the third level.

Main Paragraph of the Long Answer Question

Charley wants to escape from reality. One day, he was coming home from his office. He decided to travel by train and reached the Grand Central Railway Station. In the meantime, he lost himself in his thoughts and reached the imagistic third level, where he felt happy to see a different world. It is human nature to run away from the present, and sometimes it feels like a temporary relief, but it is not the solution to the problem.

Conclusion Paragraph of the Long Answer Question

Charley also did the same thing and lost himself in an imaginary world where he wouldn't have any stress, anxiety, or fatigue from the modern world. Therefore, the author uses the medium of the third level to explain human apathy to have some consolation in the tense situation, like Charley's way of escapism.

It would just mean running away, leaving, or ignoring a bad situation instead of dealing with it or being afraid of it.

Q.2. How did Charley reach the third level of Grand Central? What did he experience there? (HBSE 2010, 2014, 2017, 2018).

Answer:

Jack Finney is the author of "The Third Level." The author addresses the human nature of running away from a problem and seeking solace in an imaginary world in The Third Level. The author or narrator of The Third Level creates a character named Charlie who wishes to escape the problems in his life and travel to an imaginary world known as the third level. There are generally two levels: the ground level and the basement.

One day, Charley was late leaving his office and wanted to reach home early, so he decided to go by train, which is faster than a bus. He reached the basement of the Central Station. The suburban trains leave from the second level. But in the meantime, he got lost in his imagination, lost his way, and reached the so-called third level.

There has been an exit, a way out on the "Central." Maybe that's how the tunnel I got into... On the third level, he found a different setup of the railroad station. "I saw the room was smaller; there were fewer ticket windows and train gates, and the information booth in the center was wood and old-looking." And the man in the booth wore a green eyeshade and long black sleeves. On the third level, he exchanged his dollars for old currency and purchased the tickets. Suddenly, he came out of the third level and found him with his wife.

Q.3.

"The modern world is full of insecurity, fear, war, worry, and stress." What are how we attempt to overcome them? Give reference to The Third Level, where Charley wants to escape from his problem.

Answer:

The modern world is full of stress, tension, and anxiety. Sometimes, we lose control of the problem and adopt the theory of escapism, like Charley wanted to run away from the situation. We should never behave like this and must learn to tackle the situation. We must train our minds to tackle the hardships of life and always be ready to face the worst situation we will ever face.

The author or narrator of The Third Level creates a character named Charlie who wishes to escape the problems in his life and travel to an imaginary world known as the third level. Charley fought with his girlfriend, Louisa. He was lost in his thoughts and wanted to reach home with this problem on his mind. He reached the third level of Grand Central. It was a total escape from problems for Charley. On the "Central has been an exit, a way of possibly getting into the tunnel I..."

Charley also did the same thing and lost himself in an imaginary world where he wouldn't have any stress, anxiety, or fatigue from the modern world. Therefore, the author uses the medium of the third level to explain human apathy to have some consolation in the tense situation, like Charley's way of escapism. Hence, the author, Jack Finney, wants us to realize the reality of the situation and try to find a solution.

I turned into Grand Central from Vanderbilt Avenue and went down the steps to the first level, where you take trains like in the Twentieth Century. Then I walked down another flight to the second level, where the suburban trains leave from, ducked into an arched doorway heading for the subway — and got lost. That's easy to do. I've been in and out of Grand Central hundreds of times, but I'm always bumping into new doorways and stairs and corridors. Once I got into a tunnel about a mile long and came out in the lobby of the Roosevelt Hotel. Another time I came up in an office building on Forty-sixth Street, three blocks away

Answer: D. All of the above

2 Attempt ANY ONE of the two extracts given. 1*4=4

All I could hear was the empty sound of my footsteps and I didn't pass a soul. Then I heard that sort of hollow roar ahead that means open space and people talking. The tunnel turned sharp left; I went down a short flight of stairs and came out on the third level at Grand Central Station. For just a moment I thought I was back on the second level, but I saw the room was smaller, there were fewer ticket windows and train gates, and the information booth in the center was wood and old looking. And the man in the booth wore a green eyeshade and long black sleeve protectors. The lights were dim and sort of flickering. Then I saw why; they were open-flame gaslights.
